warrants all of the marketable or circulation warrants all of the marketable or circulation over the property of the State is not only a disgraceful breach of faith, without justification or excuse, but a palpable violation of both the Federal and State Constitutions which prohibits any law being passed impairing the obligation of contracts. In adviction to this an unjust and oppressive discrimination is made between that class of indebtedness, and those who hold certificates of indebtedness, and those who hold warrants issued by the Auditor. Both species of paper by the law have been declared to be receivable in payment of taxes and dues to the State; while faith is kept with one, it is recklessly broken with the other.

And thus is the State placed in an attitude against which we, as representatives in part of the people, jealous of her honor and integrity, most carnesly and honestly protest.
